POLITICAL PARADE

By CLEM WHITAKER

It is a curious paradox that the ex-New Deal, as some of the Washington writers now refer to Mr. Roosevelt's administration, began by belaboring big business as an instrument of the devil—and threatens to end up as the biggest business monopoly in the history of America!

Whether you are a Democrat or a Republican, a New Dealer or an anti-New Dealer—whether you approve or disapprove of the trend toward bigness in government—it is a fascinating political phenomenon, because it is the story of a David who slew a Goliath and then took on many of the attributes of the big fellow he so robustly pushed around.

For the same Administration which won its election by blaming the depression on "concentrated wealth," by waging relentless war on monopolies and by denouncing "economic royalists" as arch conspirators against human progress, has now become the biggest "holding company" of them all.

The trend was well advanced before the outbreak of hostilities, but just during the short period of the war the government, under President Roosevelt's guiding hand, has invested the fabulous sum of twenty-five billion dollars in industrial properties.

True, this vast industrial monopoly is owned, at least in theory, by the people—and simply represents government ownership on a scale never heretofore contemplated—but the fact remains that it is "concentrated wealth," with tremendous power for good or evil, and that relatively few men control it.

Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones, who is authority for the twenty-five billion dollar figure, reports that the government has a cool billion invested in steel production alone; that it owns aluminum plants worth $760,000,000; that it controls 92 per cent of the production of magnesium with $430,000,000 invested.

By the end of the war, predicts Mr. Jones, the government will have an investment of $625,000,000 in plants for the production of synthetic rubber, with a capacity of 900,000 tons, or more than we have ever used in peace times.

And while much of this vast concentration of industrial power in the hands of the government may have been justified by war emergency conditions, Secretary Jones warns that when the war is over the government will be in a position "to smother private enterprise" in several fundamental and key industries.

The question which Mr. Jones really raises is whether this country can endure, half under the free enterprise system—and half under State Socialism. And he apparently thinks it can't. That's something to think about, because it is quite probable that the next campaign against bigness in this country will be against Big Government!

Community and War Chest Drive Starts Here Oct. 18

State-wide campaign structure for the California War Chest drive is rapidly taking shape with county chairmen named in all 58 counties and local campaign heads appointed in nearly 500 communities.

Although most of the California community appeals will open on Oct. 18, the war relief and welfare campaign got under way nationally with a radio address by President Roosevelt Tuesday.

With a goal of $18,000,000, the state drive will seek financial aid for services on behalf of America's fighting men, United Nations relief organizations, and local welfare and health agencies.

These three fronts include:

1—For our fighting forces, the U. S. O., itself six campaigns in one, the United Seaman's Service, and War Prisoners' Aid.

2—Our Home Front which includes the agencies participating in the local community chest.

3—Our United Nations' Relief, including Russian War Relief, United China Relief, British War Relief Society, Greek War Relief association, Polish War Relief, French Relief Fund, United Yugoslav Relief Fund, Belgian War Relief Society, United Czechoslovak Relief Fund, Queen Wilhelmina Fund, Norwegian Relief, Friends of Luxembourg, Refugee Relief Trustees, and the U. S. Committee for the Care of European Children.

Campbell's quota for the combined community and war chest is $5500, divided as follows: War Chest, $3200; Y. W. C. A., $75; Y. M. C. A., $400; Boys Club Work, $100; Boy Scout Headquarters, $400; Community Youth Building (Scout hall), $100; Camp Fire Girls, $75; Campbell Library, $500; Incidental, $150; Reserve, $200.

BIBLE WEEK

California will join the rest of the nation October 11 to 17 in observing National Bible Week, the nonsectarian celebration sponsored by the Laymen's National Committee.

Never in human history has such an observance been more appropriate than at this time when the concepts of ethical religion in half the world have been challenged and scorned by amoral paganism. It is those ethical values, preserved throughout the centuries of organized religion which represent all the hopes of mankind for a better world.

The sea-drenched Bible that sustained Captain Rickenbacker and his comrades on their raft in mid-Pacific is a symbol of what religion means to our fighting men. It should mean as much to those on the home front, and National Bible Week affords an opportunity to serve notice on the world that Americans "will adhere to a consciousness of the supremacy of Almighty God."

COLUMBUS DAY

The significance of Columbus Day lies not so much in the discovery of a "New World." Rather, it is in the freedom which his adventure brought to men—freedom from the superstition and fear which centered about the flat earth theory and had bound men close to the shores of the "Old World."

Columbus' achievement also symbolizes the courage and vision that has marked the advances made by men down through the ages.

Today there are no "new worlds" to discover and explore—that is, not geographically. But the days of exploration and adventure are not over; they have hardly begun. Actually, new worlds lie all about us.

The Wright brothers discovered one of these through their invention and development of the airplane. The introduction of the radio opened another. Chemists are revealing vast new worlds in their progress with plastics, synthetics and new metals.

And beyond these inumerable worlds lies still another—long visioned, long sought for, but little realized. It is the world of fellowship and friendship among nations. This is the word, which, more than all others must be "brought down to earth" if "this old world" is to carry on. It is this world of good will and understanding that the men of the democracies fight for today.

No, the days of exploration and adventure are not dead. To the Columbuses of today, many new horizons remain yet to be discovered.

CARRY ON!

The Third War Loan Drive is over! Now some of us may feel that we can pause and rest awhile until the next campaign comes along. Well, we can't. The war isn't stopping with the close of the Bond Drive.

The home front and the fighting front have some striking similarities. For instance, after their successful stand at Salerno, the American troops did not pause. The enemy was retreating. It was important to keep him going that way.

So here at home. We are winning the battle of dollars. But we can't stop. We've got to keep on winning—to stay in there and keep pitching.

It is estimated that for every soldier overseas we must ship one ton of food and equipment for each month he is in action. It is also estimated that we now have more than 2,000,000 men "over there." The supplies must keep rolling if our men are to keep on fighting. And the dollars must keep rolling in if we are to have the money to buy those supplies.

It should be remembered that a War Bond Drive is simply designed to focus attention on the need for money, and to stimulate the greater financial support of the war effort. But there is really only one War Bond Drive—and it is perpetual.

War is all that Sherman declared it to be. So we've got to keep trying—keep buying. And let's hang on to the Bonds we buy. Cashing them in at the first opportunity is not helping the cause. Don't let the boys down. Carry on!

VANISHING AMERICAN

The Indian isn't the "vanishing American anymore—now it's the household help. Nor is the household all that's being affected by the "vanishing."

Consider the problem of one midwest rural school district. School was scheduled to open weeks ago. Fifteen pupils are anxious (?) to get back to their books. The only available teacher is ready and willing—if she can get a new maid to take care of her own four children. Her former maid left—suddenly.

Now the school trustees are scouring the countryside for that rare phenomenon—another maid. As yet, they haven't found one, But, at least, they weren't so naive as to ask the pupils to help in the search!

WORLD SERIES

The World Series—the climax of the baseball season—is at hand. In spite of nearly two years of war which have resulted in the loss of many of the game's best players to Uncle Sam's team, the National Pastime is carrying on.

It is good that it is. Reports from the front indicate that the boys "over there" want the game to continue. It gives them the feeling that America and things American will be just the same when they get back. News about baseball constitutes a link between the foxholes and home.

This year, even more than last, it will truly be a "World" Series. From Attu to Australia and from Iceland to India, millions of American boys who love the "grand old game" will be listening in.

What greater magic in morale could there be than to hear, "Ninth inning, bases loaded, two out. Here it comes—there it goes—it's a home run!"

Camile Hagen, formerly of Campbell, but now living in San Francisco, made a flying trip to Phoenix, Ariz., last week to visit friends.

Bomb Targets

Throughout the country there are thousands of war plants, marvels of efficiency and economy, yet so constructed that they are now easy targets for enemy bombers. With a little intensive training, scores of camouflage artists will be turned out in each area, who will effectively hide American industries and airports from the eyes of enemy bombardiers.

Mrs. Evelyn Ferro left today for Spokane, Wash., where she will meet her husband Seaman 2|c Frank Ferro who is stationed at Farragut, Idaho. While in Spokane she will stay at the Hotel Carlyle with Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Johnson, who are planning a celebration on Oct. 10 in honor of the Ferro's 8th wedding anniversary.

THE BOOK MARK

by marty

"Under A Lucky Star" by Roy Chapman Andrews.

A quotation came readily to mind, prompted by this book, and it is clearly exemplary of the subject matter. "Nature gives up her innermost secrets and imparts true wisdom only to him who seeks truth for its own sake, and who craves for knowledge in order to confer benefits on others, not on his own unimportant personality."- Author Unknown.

Roy Chapman Andrews was born with a burning desire to explore; to travel and discover and to tell the world his findings about animals—animals in the sea, animals on the earth and in the earth, animals living and animals centuries dead and forgotten. All the world knows that Dr. Andrews is the discoverer of the dinosaur eggs, for these small and fragile relics of an inconceivably remote past fired the public's imagination and were the sensation of their day.

It was a result of a broken leg of the author's that we, the public, are enjoying this book. While convalescing from an accident, which left him helpless for many months Dr. Andrews busied himself with writing the story of his life.

Dr. Andrews position as a naturalist is unique in that he was both a museum man and a field operator, as well as an explorer and an administrator. He has been in the staff of the American Museum of Natural History for almost all of his adult life. His scientific study first began with the whale, and his detailed description of his initial assignment to bring back a whale, is as big as the word whale implies. In the waters of the China Sea and off the shores of Japan he searched for whales and found them—many of them—black one, white ones, and gray ones. And while on the hunt for whales other animals would appear and they, too, were added subjects to his rapidly swelling list of scientific research objects. Not alone was he a scientist, for as time sped along he was for many years a leading figure in the hectic international society of the Orient, and he gives unforgettable pictures of life in Yokohama, Singapore, Tokyo, Port Said Peking, and other storied cities of the East.

The author believes he was under a lucky star, but judging from his book I would quickly say that he hitched his wagon to a star and had the courage to ride along. It's a lucky star that we are born under to have the privilege to read his book.

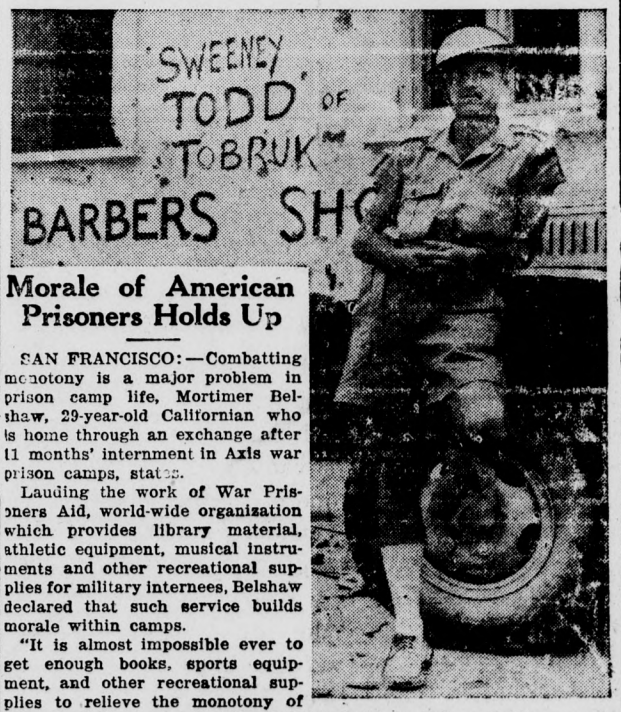
EX-PRISONER LAUDS WAR CHEST WORK IN NAZI PRISON CAMPS



Ambulance Driver Belshaw waits his turn outside shell-pocked Tobruk "barbers shop" just before capture by Rommel's gang.

Morale of American Prisoners Holds Up

SAN FRANCISCO:—Combatting monotony is a major problem in prison camp life, Mortimer Belshaw, 29-year-old Californian who is home through an exchange after 11 months' internment in Axis war prison camps, states.

Lauding the work of War Prisoners Aid, world-wide organization which provides library material, athletic equipment, musical instruments and other recreational supplies for military internees, Belshaw declared that such service builds morale within camps.

"It is almost impossible ever to get enough books, sports equipment, and other recreational supplies to relieve the monotony of prison camp," he stated. Considerable interest also is evinced by the boys in studying to prepare themselves for life afterward. Morale among our American prisoners is good, and the work of War Prisoners Aid of the YMCA is helping greatly to make it that way."

War Prisoners Aid is permitted under the 1929 Geneva convention relative to the treatment of prisoners of war to provide for the recreational, intellectual and spiritual welfare of internees. Neutral representatives of the organization are allowed by the convention to visit internment camps of belligerents periodically. A member agency of the California War Chest, War Prisoners Aid will receive support through approximately 1,000 community appeals to be conducted in California on behalf of war relief agencies during October and November.

The ex-internee, a former San Francisco advertising man, enlisted as a volunteer ambulance driver for the American Field Service in 1941. He was attached to the New Zealand division of the renowned British Eighth Army at the time of his capture in June, 1942. Belshaw's ambulance, carrying four wounded soldiers, was immobilized during a daring break-through achieved by the New Zealand division after encirclement by the Germans. Although his status as an ambulance driver was that of civilian noncombatant medical personnel, he was "rounded up" with other captives taken during the break-through and sent to a military prison camp.

During the 11 months he was held by the Axis, Belshaw was interned in three camps in Africa and four in Italy. He was repatriated through an exchange of medical personnel in April of this year. At the expiration of his 60-day furlough, he will return to duty overseas with the American Field Service.

War Bond Sales Net $154,139.75

The latest report on the Campbell Third War Bond sales as made by W. H. Van Dyke and W. N. Lloyd amounted to $154,139.75.

Although the bond drive was concluded Saturday, the time has been extended so that any purchases made by Oct. 16, will be counted on the quota and by that time it is hoped the total will be nearer the quota of $180,000.

This quota was set according to population, but many of the people living in the Campbell district work in defense plants and elsewhere and bought their bonds there which made it difficult to attain the goal set.

Recently enlisted in the Navy from Campbell are James Crawley, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Crawley, and Junior Potts, of Empey Way. David T. Crawley who is also in the Navy was home on leave last week.

El Salvador, like its neighboring Middle American republics, is supplying its vital share of strategic war crops to the United Nations' war effort. To its plentiful and choice coffee crop it has added henequen and sisal (for twine), kapok, castor oil, Balsam of Peru, and, experimentally, rubber, all important war materials. El Salvador's production of tropical crops is primary evidence of the interdependence between the United States and Middle America. After the war, that interdependence will continue to be the cornerstone of hemispheric solidarity.

Grapes are Ripe for Jelly and Jam!

By BETTY BARCLAY

From the beginning of history, connoisseurs of food have always appreciated the grape. Music and poetry have always sung its praises. And while it is true that the grapes of the old country were good, it is a well-known fact that American soil is particularly well adapted to this fruit. The wealth of our climate also produces an infinite variety in types of grapes.

But whatever type of grape is available, there is one thing certain, it will make a delicious sweet spread. Then, too, the grape is such a versatile fruit . . . in addition to jams and jellies, there are conserves, grape butter and subtle combinations with other fruits.

Modern recipes assure us of a perfect product, and they save both time and energy. Tested recipes turn out jellies with a half-minute boil and jams in only a minute or so. Every batch of fruit means half-again more glasses and the rich flavor of fully ripe fruit. Try these today:

Grape Jelly

(Makes about 11 medium glasses)

5 cups juice
6½ cups sugar*
1 box powdered fruit pectin

To prepare juice, stem about 3½ pounds fully ripe grapes and crush them thoroughly. Add 1½ cups water, bring to a boil, and simmer, covered, 10 minutes. Place fruit in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice.

Measure sugar into dry dish and set aside until needed. Measure juice into a 5- to 6-quart saucepan.

Place over hottest fire. Add powdered fruit pectin, mix well, and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. At once pour in sugar, stirring constantly. Continue stirring, bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard ½ minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once.

*3¼ cups light corn syrup may be substituted for 3¼ cups of the sugar.

Concord Grape Butter

4½ cups pulp
7 cups sugar*
½ bottle fruit pectin

To prepare fruit, stem about 5 pounds fully ripe grapes and crush thoroughly. Add ½ cup water, bring to a boil, cover, and simmer 5 minutes. Separate juice from pulp by placing hot fruit in 2-quart sieve. Run enough juice through a double layer of cheesecloth held in a small sieve to obtain 4 cups strained juice. Use for making grape jelly or grape juice. Rub grapes, from which juice has drained, through sieve to obtain pulp.

Measure sugar and grape pulp into large kettle, filling up last cup with excess juice or water, if necessary. Mix well.

Bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard 1 minute.

Remove from fire and stir in bottled fruit pectin. Pour quickly. Paraffin hot butter at once. Makes about 11 glasses (6 fluid ounces each).

*2 cups light corn syrup may be substituted for 2 cups of the sugar.
